

Voice-over of the video 'A day at work with... Jorge'

Jorge 'Hi, I'm Jorge and this is a day in my life working at Iberdrola. Today it's time to go to a facility that is visiting us all the way from Brazil. So I get ready: laptop, notebook, some food – since I'll get hungry later –, and my bottle from Murcia, so I don't miss it'.

'So off we go to the station. This is a trip I usually make two or three times a month or so, and the destination is Puertollano (it says Málaga, but it's the same train) and to my surprise it has neither a port (puerto) nor is it flat (llano), but I love it because we have one of our green hydrogen plants there, the biggest in Europe. By the way, I haven't told you that I work in the green hydrogen department, a subject that fascinates me because it's developing as we speak and you learn every day'.

'And here we are! Here we produce hydrogen, which is then used to produce green fertilisers. Hold on! Before we start, we need to put on our PPE. Safety first. Now we'll explain the most relevant aspects of the plant. In this case, we accompanied none other than the Secretary of Environment and Infrastructure of the State of Rio Grande do Sul. Very nice people, by the way. In between, I take the opportunity to do a bit of office work, which you can't do alone, so I connect with my team to catch up with them, who, as you can see, are the best'.

'Once the visit is over, I go with my colleagues from the plant to have lunch. We go to 'Rubio', a great bar in town. Today it's tortellini, fried anchovies and custard, some mother can see that we eat well'.

'We finish and go back to the station. I go back with Iván, our trusted taxi driver, a real pro. On the train I take the opportunity to go over some stuff I have pending and listen to a podcast on stuff I like. A bit of a geek, really. And when I arrive I leave in a hurry because I have a match with the company's 7-a-side football league. This year we came in third!'.

'And that was my day at the company where I started thanks to the Graduate Programme, an Iberdrola opportunity for young people, with which you can also move around the world. I'm going to Australia, it's amazing. If you're interested, I'll leave the link. Who knows, maybe in the future we'll be colleagues. See you later!'
