

Check your electronic invoices securely

Many services offer the option of consulting invoices online, which cybercriminals know and use all kinds of techniques (false calls, emails ...) to get access to users' accounts and obtain an monetary return.

Do not let them fool you and follow our advice:

If you receive an invoice by mail, check the sender's address and be careful with the links and attachments.

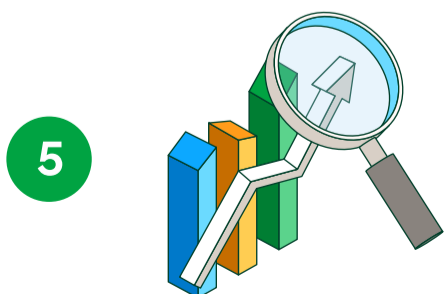

It is safer to consult it by accessing the portals or official applications directly.

Take care of your access codes and do not share them with anyone.

Remember that no organization will request your passwords or any other confidential information (verification code, bank details ...) through instant messaging, email, SMS or phone call.

Periodically review your data and movements and if you detect something suspicious, contact the corresponding service company.
